

Community Relations Week 2014

16th - 22nd June 2014

Each year Community Relations Week sees a series of events celebrating good relations in Northern Ireland rolled out. It is an opportunity to showcase the great work that goes on quietly all year round to build and sustain relationships. It is a time to celebrate the ethnic and cultural diversity of our community and the many imaginative ways in which we are building a shared cultural region.

The theme of this year's Community Relations Week is Building a United Community.

Each year a series of events across Northern Ireland is organised by voluntary and community groups, District Councils, schools, libraries and other public bodies. Community Relations Week is packed with great examples of the united community that is being built all around us right now. Most of the events are open to the public.

Events across Northern Ireland are organised across council areas, including HSCB Office areas, such as Armagh, Ballymena, Derry and Belfast.

These range from celebrations of world culture featuring workshops, performances from schools and guest artists in Ballymena to a wide programme of activities will be held over two days covering good relations, health and wellbeing and community involvement in Armagh.

The full series of events can be found at the Community Relations Council website (<http://www.community-relations.org.uk/about-us/community-relations-week-2014-16th-22nd-june/>).
