Targeting On-line Behaviour

How Technology Impacts on Children's Emotional Health and Wellbeing

The Western Esafety steering group invite you to an interactive, discussion based workshop with Professor Andy Phippen (Plymouth University). Andy specialises in how children and young people use technology and will address a range of digital behaviours with a focus on gaming. The workshop is hosted in partnership with the Western Health and Social Care Trust, NSPCC and the Public Health Agency.

This seminar is for anyone who works with children and young people, educators, carers, influencers, policy makers, parents, public protection, health care professionals, community and voluntary organisations.

The masterclass will give you the opportunity to discuss:

- Striking the balance between embracing new technology and being emotionally healthy;
- What children and young people do online – the gap between what they know and what we need to know!
- The tensions between online safety messages, policy, behaviours and culture.
