

RESILIENCE is the award winning film that is helping the world wake up to the far reaching impact of childhood trauma on children, communities and society.

Emotional well-being in young children is a fundamental priority for early years' services. The role of practitioners in supporting emotional development cannot be understated.

Join us for a one day seminar for early years' practitioners. The seminar will explore the importance of early attachment and addresses the importance of secure attachment relationships in building a foundation for resilience. It will also address how relationships, trauma and adverse childhood experiences impact on brain development and physical, social and emotional health. The seminar will include a screening of the award winning RESILIENCE documentary film.

The screening is being hosted by Dartmouth Films and HSCB.
