Integrating Parent-Infant Mental Health: Why Babies Can't Wait

Register here by Monday 6 January 2020

What's happening?

Public Health Agency and National Children's Bureau are delighted to host this workshop as part of PHA's ongoing commitment to lead on innovative and intelligent commissioning for infant and perinatal mental health.

In this workshop, Dr. Caroline White (Consultant Clinical Psychologist and Head of the Children & Parents' Service, Manchester University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust) will share learning on integrating parent and infant mental health, with a focus on pathways and service standards.

Who should attend?

Frontline practitioners, service & workforce leads and commissioners from education, health and social care with an interest in perinatal mental health, infant mental health, early years education or family support.

About CAPS:

CAPS is recognised as a model of best practice for children's social and emotional wellbeing by the National Institute of Health and Care Excellence (NICE) in the UK and has received international recognition for sustainable implementation of evidence based practice. The service is also highlighted nationally as an effective Specialist Parent-Infant Relationship Team.
